

PRESS RELEASE

Jabil, Livingston

Veitchi Industrial Flooring Ltd have recently completed works for Electronic Product Solutions Company Jabil at their Livingston manufacturing plant.

Due to continued evolution of their manufacturing systems and increased loadings on the floor Veitchi advised that the original vinyl flooring should be changed to a more durable resin system which would provide greater impact resistance, a decorative appearance, slip resistance whilst maintaining ease of cleaning and critically the static dissipation requirement of the manufacturing facility.

In conjunction with industry experts Altro, Veitchi met with the client's technical representatives to clarify the stringent performance standards required in areas handling sensitive electronic equipment. Altroscreed Quartz SD was specified to satisfy conductivity requirements and the need for slip-resistance for safety under-foot. Despite the complexities associated with dissipative resin flooring, the installation area of 1200m² took place whilst production was maintained to the rest of the factory behind temporary screens. Post-installation testing proved that the flooring met the client's technical requirements and the durable, decorative floor-finish entered service.

Robbie Graham, Jabil Facilities Lead, commented – “The floor installation was good from start to finish and the team did a very impressive job. All the area was laid by hand and they took good care to make sure it was done correctly and to a very good standard.” He then summarised – “Over all a good job was done and to a high standard”
